Next Week's Entertainer

T. Alex. Cairns, B. D., Ph. D., is the witliest of Irish orators. As he says himself, "I was born in Ireland when I was a boy." And possessing, as he does, the exceptional combination of abilities of the orator, entertainer, dramatic reader, preacher and after-dinner speaker, he is a great Lecturer, with few peers on the platform. At the Jubilee Convention at Columbus in 1913, there were on the program eight Governors, many United States Senators and Congressmen, and the greatest temperance orators of the country, yet many declared Dr. Cairns' address the greatest of the convention. At its close the vast audience of five thousand arose spontaneously to their feet and cheered and cheered. Dr. Cairns is gifted with flashing Irish wit, clear and forcible logic, rare dramatic and interpretative power, broad and statesmanlike philosophy, a wonderful mastery of epigrammatic English, a marvelous versatility, warm-souled humanitarianism, and a well cultured voice that is far-reaching, penetrating and musical.

Dr. Cairns will appear in Assembly Hall Wednesday evening, January 27, under the auspices of the Bedford High School Alumni Association.

Schools to Observe Lincoln's Birthday To the Teachers of Bedford County:

Resolution five of the Report of the Resolution Committee at our recent Teachers' Institute read as follows: "Resolved that we recognize the value of the life of Abraham Lincoln upon the history of our country and to show our appreciation of the same we recommend that appropriate exercises be held in every school of the county on the 12th day of February, that every pupil of suitable age be required to commit the famous Gettysburg Oration and at least one pupil recite it during these exercises."

In view of this fact and in remembrance of the good that has come from special days in the past we would name Friday, February 12, to be known as Lincoln Day or Patrons' Day. As this is the birthday of that great character, Abraham Lincoln, and near the birthdays of so many illustrious men whose history and literary production are of such interest and importance to our youth, the teachers of Bedford County are earnestly requested to hold appropriate exercises in their several schools on the above named date.

This day offers a great opportunity to increase confidence and to come to a better understanding with the patrons regarding the school and its work.

Be sure to have pupils send a personal invitation to all parents, directors, and patrons of the school. Make it the big day of this school term. Respectfully submitted, Lloyd H. Hinkle, County Superintendent.

John C. Chamberlain of Everett, has been appointed to a clerkship in the State Senate. We are not advised as to the magnitude of the place, nor whether it requires his presence in order to draw his pay but it seems to us that while he will make a good clerk, he has had his share of political pudding by holding the Everett Postoffice for several years. More than that we are informed that he is thinking of running for prothonotary of Bedford County.

Some time ago the North American stated that the Harrisburg authorities would have to give the Hon. John M. Reynolds an anesthetic in order to serve him from a job.

stating that he was the most dignified job holder on Capitol Hill. He prided himself in the fact that he was an office holder. Well, he didn't go down to Harrisburg to the inauguration because he was sick. What made him sick, or what he was sick for or about, we cannot say. His job ended recently.

BEDFORD PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Report for Fourth Month Beginning Nov. 23 and Ending Jan. 8.

In submitting this report I desire to call attention to the total enrollment and the enrollment of the First Grade. In this grade you will notice a congestion due to the great number of children attending school for the first time and not due to hold-overs. In my opinion seventy-seven pupils for one teacher are too many if results are to be obtained. In fact the enrollment is more than seventy-seven but because bad weather and other causes not all attended during the month. By another year this grade should be divided and another school established to meet the growing demand.

The total attendance for the month was 250 boys and 257 girls, a total of 507.

As an experiment a year ago agriculture was made a part of the high school course. Considering the demand that is being made throughout the country districts for this department I wish to say this school is ready at any time to extend this course so as to make it a separate department so as to meet the requirements laid down by the State Department if there is sufficient demand for it. There is no reason in the world for Bedford, Napier, Colerain, and Snake Spring Townships not sending at least 36 boys and girls to this high school. We are trying our best to make our course practical. If these districts would give us their support as they should there is no reason for not having a separate agricultural department next year. It is up to you. If you give us the boys and girls we shall do our part.

ST. LOUIS AS A VILLAGE.

In 1767 it had forty-five houses and as many families.

Captain Philip Pitman, an officer in the engineering corps of the British Army, was selected by General Gage in 1767 to make an expert report on the territory just acquired from France on the east side of the Mississippi river. Pitman came to the Mississippi valley, the Illinois country it then was called, and traveled about for several months. Here is what he wrote of St. Louis in the early part of 1767:

"This village is one league and a half above Kaskaskia, on the west side of the Mississippi, being the present headquarters of the French in these parts. It was first established in the year 1764 by a company of merchants, to whom M. D'Abbadie had given an exclusive grant for the commerce with the Indian nations on the river Missouri, and for the security and encouragement of this settlement the staff of French officers and the commissary were ordered to remove here upon the surrendering of Fort Chartres (forty miles south of St. Louis on the Illinois side to the English), and great encouragement was given to the inhabitants to remove with them, most of whom did.

"The company has built a large house and store here, and there are about forty-five houses and as many families. No fort or barracks are yet built. The French garrison consists of a captain, two lieutenants, a major, one sergeant, one corporal and twenty men."—St. Louis Times.

CURING SLICE IN GOLF.

An Expert Suggests Some Remedies For a Troublesome Habit.

The slice is unfortunately a common fault at golf, destroying all hope of accuracy as well as distance in the drive. The remedy becomes obvious as soon as the cause of slicing is thoroughly understood. That it is due to a horizontal rotation of the ball in its flight is unquestionable, from the analogy of the curved ball in baseball. The question is as to how this motion of rotation is imparted to the ball.

The remedy lies either in eliminating the twist of the wrists or in compensation for it by turning the club in the hands while addressing the ball. If you are a confirmed slicer turn the club in the hands so that the face slants sharply inward while the hands and arms are otherwise held in the usual position. Address the ball with the club in this position and then swing as usual. You will be agreeably surprised to see a straight ball or a pull. A few trials will serve to determine the position of the club in addressing the ball which will give the desired straight shot.

All the curves, the slice, the pull and the rise are sharply emphasized in long shots. The sharp, hard blow of a rapid stroke sets up a much more rapid rotation of the ball just as in the billiard shots.—E. K. Stuart in Outing Magazine.

Formation of Ice.

The cause assigned for the fact that water freezes only for a comparatively small space at the surface of rivers or ponds is explained. Scientists authoritatively declare that water is at its heaviest when it reaches 40 degrees F.—that is, 8 degrees above freezing point. On a frosty night, as each top layer of water falls to 40 degrees it sinks to the bottom, therefore the whole pond has to drop to 40 degrees before any of it can freeze. At length it is all cooled to this point, and then ice begins to form. But ice is a very bad conductor of heat, therefore it shuts off the freezing air from the body of warmer water underneath. The thicker it gets the more perfectly does it act as a greatcoat and that is why even the Arctic ocean never freezes beyond a few feet in thickness.

An Untouched Subject.

In L'Esprit des Français is an instance of the sharp, biting wit for which Alexis Piron, the French epigrammatist, was famous.

A young author whose ability was by no means equal to his conceit was discoursing at length upon the merits of his work.

"I am tired of writing of that of which the others write," he said. "I want to create an original work, something that no one has ever written about or ever will write about."

Piron turned quickly to the speaker. "Why not write your own eulogy?" he said.

Very Sweet Words.

"Are there any sweeter words in the English language," musingly inquired Professor Swiggs, "than 'I love you'?"

"Well," grimly remarked the pessimist, "hearer, 'I understand that some authorities regard 'There's that money I owe you' as about the epitome of satisfactory sentences."—New York Globe.

Chinese Cabbage Seed.

Rape seed is termed by the Chinese trade "cabbage seed," while Chinese farmers style it "cabbage oil seed." As grown in Loongwah district, near Shanghai, it yields 200 catties (equal to 1,600 pounds) an acre where the soil is favorable.

Social Scale.

"Pa," said Freddy, "what is a social scale?"

"Generally speaking," replied pa, "it's a place where they weigh money."

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP.

(Excerpts from an address delivered before the National W. C. T. U. convention by Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp of Kentucky.)

Why do we have blind babies? We do not have blind calves, blind colts, blind pigs, and blind lambs. While the problem confronts us the statistician steps up behind us and tells us that 68 per cent of all the children that are born blind come into this world thus hampered because the grimy hand of the liquor traffic, through the drink habit of the parents or grandparents lifted itself out of the past and projected itself into the future, and closed the eyes of the children before they were born. The scientists tell us that so far as the blight upon future generations is concerned, a man would better get hilariously drunk now and then and stay sober the rest of the time, than to be a constant, moderate drinker, continually taking into his system small quantities of alcohol.

I ask you to estimate how many blind children we have in the United States, count the cost to the state of maintaining its institutions for the blind, and then put it down as part of the tribute we annually render to King Alcohol that he may go on in his work of putting out the eyes of generations that are to come.

Why should America have deaf children? As you are pondering upon this problem the statistician again steps up behind you and says, as in the case of the blind, that about 68 out of every 100 (taking the average throughout the land) of all these children who are born deaf, are the victims of this same great destroyer, the liquor traffic. If the lower animals were fed on alcohol, as is the higher animal, they would have deaf colts, and deaf calves, and deaf pigs, and deaf lambs. Did you ever think what this means? What it means in economic loss to the nation.

From 25 to 50 per cent of all the insane in this nation are victims of alcohol used sometimes on the prescription of the physician; sometimes constantly in patent nostrums; often in moderate quantities, and frequently to excess.

Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and Kentucky are the six great whisky producing states of this nation. Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Kentucky have the largest percentage of insanity of any of the states of this nation. Do you call that coincidence? I don't. I call it cause and effect. You can't trample God's laws under foot and go unwhipped of justice. Sometimes I get a good deal mixed up on the question of who the criminals are. Often I am quite convinced that the poor fellow behind the bars is not half so bad as the man who walks down the street, prides himself on his strength, and puts into the box a ballot to euthrone in office men who he knows will not enforce the law.

I want you to go with me to the prison for a little while at the time the men fall in line to march to their cells at night. If you have such a splendid Christian warden as we have in our Kentucky state reformatory and in our state penitentiary, you can say to him, "Won't you call that line to a halt and order every man who came here for offenses committed when he was under the influence of alcoholic liquor, as shown by the evidence adduced in the trial, to step out of that line over here." If you are not up on statistics you will be amazed at the results. If you were in Kentucky 86 out of every 100 of these men, according to the decisions of the courts, would step out and form a new line. If you were in New York, according to the decisions of the courts, 92 out of every 100 would step forward. I ask you, which is more of a criminal, the man who votes to establish an institution to make criminals, or the poor fellow, who with muddled brain commits some offense for which he is sentenced to the penitentiary?

HEAVENLY CONDITIONS.

A country clergyman in Russia writing of the improved conditions in that country under prohibition, says: "The old women in the villages can hardly believe their own eyes and ears, so changed are their men folk. Not a hard word, not a row, but every where peace, kindness and industry. War is said to be hell, but this is like a foretaste of heaven."

BOLIVIA'S SACRED LAKE.

Over a Billion in Treasure Said to Be Sunk in Its Muddy Bed.

Legend has it that for more than 500 years the lake of Guativila, at an elevation of 10,000 feet in Bolivia, has not only been held sacred to the gods of the Indian tribes, but into its waters the natives, with solemn ceremony, used to cast their gold and silver ornaments, gems and other valuables as an offering to propitiate the evil spirits. It has been estimated that in this manner treasure to the amount of $1,500,000,000 found its way to the bottom of the lake.

Many attempts were made to recover the treasure. The first was by the Spaniards 250 years ago. They tried to drain off the waters of the lake, but their engineering skill was not equal to the task. When they had drawn off all but ten feet of the water they were compelled to give up their project and take to dredging instead. They did succeed in recovering a small part of the treasure in this way.

The most modern attempt was made twenty years ago by a company of Colombians and Englishmen. By digging a tunnel 1,100 feet long down the side of the mountain they succeeded in draining the lake, but then they found to their dismay, instead of a clear bottom, twenty-five feet of mud covering the treasure. In all this company spent $75,000 and recovered but $10,000 worth of gold and jewels before they, too, abandoned the search.—Argonaut.

A VERSATILE MONARCH.

Peter the Great of Russia Was a Real Jack of All Trades.

All historians agree that Peter the Great of Russia was a man of various accomplishments. After he became emperor he worked as a shipbuilder in Amsterdam. His object was to study the construction of ships that the information gained as an ordinary workman might aid him in establishing a first class navy in his own country. He also studied anatomy and seemed to delight in dissecting human bodies. He is said to have acted as executioner on several occasions, one being when, after the siege of Narva, certain soldiers disobeyed orders, whereupon he sentenced them to death and killed them himself. He was also wont to fog criminals with his own hands.

He practiced as a surgeon in his own country, where he was accustomed to perform amputations as well as to bleed persons and draw teeth. In his pockets he usually carried a case of surgical instruments. His versatility is indicated by the relics preserved in Peter's museum, St. Petersburg, where there are ship models, a chandelier and other iron articles and ivory figures, all his own construction. In the same place there is at present on exhibition a wax model of the great emperor wearing a pair of shoes and a wig made by himself.—London Standard

The title of John Galsworthy's new serial in this issue, "The Freelanders," comes from a very interesting family of that name. The Parisian Silhouette Reigns Supreme

The Short Coat Combines With a Full Gored Skirt

THE LARGE NEW HAT

New York, January 18, 1915.

When the war broke out in August the world was positive that there would be no more Paris fashions. "American Clothes for American Women" became the slogan of the day, emphasized and encouraged by dressmakers and manufacturers.

After all was said and done, however, the silhouette which Paris launched in August is that which has taken the United States by storm this winter. The waist is close fitting at the shoulders with a waistline well defined and the short skirt smooth over the hips and flaring at the ankles. The skirts are usually three-piece, although many are circular and some have as many as nine gores! But with all these gores and fullness, they do not look at all like the many gores skirts we wore in the skirt shows the panel front which is again coming into favor.

This is an attractive method for developing covert cloth, serge or gabardine. And is a style which will prove itself also suitable for the spring street suit.

A dashing street costume to be worn under a separate coat is the other illustration. It is a little like the short jackets which I have already spoken of. The waist buttons with a Russian closing at the side. The collar is a high military band and small frogs of braid down the closing add to the military effect of the dress. The style lies in the square-boxed effect of the belt. The three-piece circular skirt has the fashionable flare and is cut the short length which adds a touch of special style to a suit or frock. The hat which is shown on this model is the type of large hat which is coming in, and which will more than likely have a vogue for the late spring and summer. Let us hope that it will, and that another August will not see us in small velvet hats which are both hot and shadeless, as was the case last summer.

Shopping or for other street wear the woman who tries to keep up with the latest whim of Dame Fashion wears a skirt full and short. A short jacket buttoning high at the neck with a fur band for the collar, small armholes and long close-fitting sleeves finishing with a band of fur. Upon milady's head a small sailor is perched a little forward on the head. The hat is trimmed with gros-grain ribbon which ends in streamers in the back. In her hands she carries a muff of barrel or melon shape.

In the afternoon she dons a dress whose skirt flares well away from the first few years of this century, but appear in their style like those skirts and dresses of the Victorian period, with a "stick-i-outness" similar to the hoop skirts of that day. In fact some of these dresses have petticoats with a reed run through a casing just above the knees. This holds out the fluffy full skirt in a delightfully easy manner.

A New Version of the Russian Blouse Dress

This is a style which is adapted especially to the thinner fabrics such as silk and the light weight cotton materials, so it is without a doubt that many flounced full skirts, over full, starched or reeded petticoats will be the order of the summer season.

The rapid arrival of the short coat is a thing which also surprised many people, who had bought the long full winter jackets expecting them to last until spring. Alas for their hopes, for after all the prognostications to the contrary, this season has not been so very different from others in the rapid changes in styles which seem to come to pass over night.

This short jacket originated with the house of Callot in Paris. They launched the first short coat and kept repeating it until the world of style felt its effect and embraced the new idea.

One eccentric model has a short jacket which buttons in the back! But it is only the extremists among Fashion's followers which would follow her to such lengths as this. Another model fastens on one side with a high beaver collar and the lower edge of the jacket is finished at the bottom with a belt of beaver which reaches just to the waistline. The armhole is small and the long tight sleeves are finished with a tight band of beaver. The skirt is five-gored and perfectly plain.

For the conservative dress for general wear this midwinter comes a model which I am using for my illustration. The blouse is made with a square yoke from which hangs the rest of the blouse which is slightly full at the lower edge. The collar is a band of fur, as are the cuffs to the long tight sleeves. The jacket buttons on the side and a medium width belt holds in the fullness around the waist. The attractive feet, the bodice rather snug-fitting at the shoulders and round-waisted. The sleeves to this dress are long and placed into an armhole rather small and piped around. The waist is buttoned straight down the front from the top of the high collar to the lower edge of the waist. This waist is more than likely placed on the outside of the skirt in much the same way as the old-fashioned basque.

To the evening party milady wears a dress with a slender under slip over which is a full skirt of maline, chiffon or lace. This skirt may hang from an Empire line, a round waistline or from a velvet or satin bodice moyer age length.

Beading and embroidery of gold or silver is the accepted method of trimming these evening frocks.

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 22, 1915.

The State of Washington will go dry in 1916, January first.

Assemblyman E. H. Blackburn has been placed on Corporations Committee and also County and Township Committee.

The American Car and Foundry Company of Milton, Pa., has increased its time from nine to 13 hours a day for its workmen. The Carnegie Steel Plant is opening up new furnaces and mills. Some have opened up for work and many will open up in February and March. They must have seen prosperity or hold it at finger's ends, or no new works costing millions would have been completed.

COMMENDATION FOR BRUMBAUGH

We congratulate Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh upon his stand for his utterances on the stump, for in proclaiming them again in his inaugural address he emphasizes the fact that he expects these private policies of his to pass and by laying down the private planks he antagonizes the greatest element in the Republican party and that element is the protected interests fostered and cradled by the party now in power. He antagonizes the Republican platform and the Republican leaders and especially Penrose and the liquor interests. While Brumbaugh means good, he needs to be on his guard to pass the measures he advocates. The Republican party is opposed to a Local Option law, a Child Labor law, a Workmen's Compensation law and an Employers' Liability law. These measures are all Democratic and Progressive and to get them on the statute books of this Commonwealth is no small task, even for a husky fellow like the Governor.

Brumbaugh will observe already that the Senate Committee to consider the Local Option measure is packed from top to almost the bottom with liquor protectionists. At the bottom is one little lone local option advocate to give the committee a little respectability, that's all.

We wish to commend Dr. Brumbaugh also on his advocacy of a non-partisan road management and the efficiency of supervision which he advocates. If this policy be invoked, former road masters and superintendents, whose only qualifications were found in their ability to deliver votes and run saloons, will be set to the rear and men of actual road knowledge will be brought to the front. We know of many a farmer who would make a better road superintendent than many whom they had on the roads in Bedford County. We want also to commend him on his civil service stand. While the declaration was brief he said enough if he means to stand firm for it.

THE TEST OF REVIVALS

Rev. Billy Sunday is drawing tens of thousands to his revival tabernacle in Philadelphia. There is no vaudeville monologist who uses such an assortment of slang. He appears to believe that a person who will not assent to his own personal creed is headed straight for the pit. And yet he does seem to have some power to reform character.

Brother Sunday, as a believer in the literal Bible, must have reflected upon that passage where the Lord said unto Moses, Draw not nigh; higher, put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place where thou standest is holy ground. In modern terms, that signifies that the name of deity is not to be flippantly used, and that places of worship are to be entered with reverence. Billy Sunday, with his comedy stunts, is certainly no Moses of the Exodus, who approached the presence of God in the Burning Bush with fear and awe.

Some offences against good taste can be overlooked if character is reformed.

But the real test of a revivalist's work is not the line of men who "hit the sawdust trail." The country is full of revivalists who possess a certain magnetism, before which all the difficulties of changing habits seem to vanish.

The real test comes when the preacher is gone, the crowd scattered, and a man is up against the old temptation to take the easiest way. The obscure pastor of the home church, the unknown worker in a Sunday School or fraternity, is perhaps more often the real agent in a man's amendment. It is comparatively easy to get men to confess their sins amid the contagion of a friendly crowd. Quite another for some weak willed fellow to walk the straight and narrow path with the "boys" joshing him.

THE HIGH COST OF DISTRIBUTION. NO. 1

The past summer was a year of agricultural fertility. Food products ought to be cheap this winter. In a great many rural districts fruits and vegetables have been rotting under the trees and in the garden. Yet while apples, for instance, were wanting in the country, you might have to pay $3 to $5 a barrel to buy them in the cities. Similarly with other products.

The biggest cause of high cost of living is the expense of getting the food from the farms to the consumer. It is the purpose of a series of editorial articles to describe briefly the present bungling methods of getting food to the consumer, and to touch on certain suggestions that have been made for lowering the high cost of this distribution.

An investigation was recently made in a city of 100,000 people, of the cost of delivering milk. It was found that something like 100 milk carts were traveling through the place daily, and covering in the aggregate a distance of 2,400 miles. Yet there are but about 250 miles of streets in that city. Hence 10 milk carts on an average went through each street. The time of nine of those teams was largely wasted. The consumer paid the needless cost. Similarly the teams and motor cars that collected the milk from the outlying country were running over the same ground.

An even more remarkable case is reported from a town of 6,000 people to provide which with milk 50 different carts traverse the same streets day by day.

In the city first referred to the milk consumers were paying eight to nine cents per quart. Yet the farmers got but four cents. Some of them at a distance get but two and a half to three cents.

Although the consumer is already paying a high price for milk, yet in many places farmers are quitting the dairy business, because of low returns, and milk famines seem likely. It may yet prove necessary to jack up the consumer another cent or two.

An endless number of similar instances could be given, showing the inefficiency of present methods of getting food from the farm to the town.

Company L

Captain Reiley has issued an order promoting Privates Vernon W. Fletcher and Henry O. Whetstone to the rank of Corporal. These promotions were ordered pursuant to results of the examination held last Friday evening. Other promotions will probably be announced in the near future.

Recruits are coming in, but a few more men are still needed to bring the Company up to the new quota prescribed in the recent order from headquarters. Fred F. May, Joseph R. Middleton and Harry C. Lesh have enlisted as members of the Company.

All clothing and other equipment of the organization has recently been cleaned and gone over preparatory to the coming annual inspections.

Great interest is being taken in the School of Instruction, both by non-coms and privates, and the Company drills are being well attended. This evening Lieutenant Heit will instruct the men in the manual of the bayonet. Recruit instructions will be given the newly enlisted men and special drills will be had in close and open order.

The rifle scores have been received from the Inspector of Small Arms Practice, Captain Copelin. All the members of the Company who shot on the Range have qualified, and Sergeant Banner and Private Whetstone have qualified as sharpshooters.

BENEFIT OF SOLDIERS

The County Commissioners are supposed, under the law, to maintain a permanent Bugial Committee in each borough or township for the purpose of certifying to the death, burial, etc., of old soldiers. These committees were formed in 1898 and have never been revised. Many members have died and many have moved away. If the soldiers of the county would suggest members for replenishing these committees, the County Commissioners would appreciate it very much. Let the soldiers or a committee for that purpose suggest three from each district for this duty and hand the list to the Commissioners. Act as quickly as possible on this matter.

The committee need be only persons of reputable character and mature age and residents of the district, but it is suggested by the Commissioners that soldiers and sons of soldiers be recommended where there are sufficient number in the district. The committee appointed by the Commissioners are, when called upon, required to take charge of and bury the body and ascertain the facts concerning the record of deceased.

The Act in Full

"In accordance with the provisions of an Act of Assembly, passed the 10th day of June, A. D. 1911, amending Act of Assembly passed 23rd day of April, A. D. 1909.

"Section 1. Be it enacted, etc. That it shall be the duty of the County Commissioners of each county in this State to appoint a sufficient number of suitable persons, in each township and ward in their county, other than those prescribed by law for the care of paupers and the custody of criminals, whose duty it shall be, upon application made to them, to look after and cause to be buried, in a decent and respectable manner, in any cemetery or burial ground within this State, other than those used exclusively for the burial of the pauper dead, at an expense to their county not exceeding fifty dollars ($50), the body of any honorably discharged soldier, sailor, or marine, who served in the army or navy of the United States during the war with Spain, or any preceding war, and shall hereafter die in their county, and of all who were in active service in the Militia of the State of Pennsylvania, under and in pursuance of any of the proclamations issued by the Governor during the Civil War, and not duly mustered into service of the United States, and shall hereafter die in their county, or in any hospital, asylum, soldier home, almshouse, prison, or house of detention in this Commonwealth, or shall die beyond the State of Pennsylvania, and shall have had legal residence within their county at the time of their death, and the persons so appointed shall hold their offices at the pleasure of the County Commissioners, and shall serve without compensation.

"Section 2. It shall be the duty of the persons so appointed in each township and ward in each county, before assuming the charge and expense of the burial of the body of any deceased soldier, sailor or marine, in their township or ward, under the provisions of this act, first to satisfy themselves, by a careful inquiry into and examination of all the circumstances in the case of such deceased soldier, sailor, or marine, whose body they are called upon to bury, served in the army or navy of the United States during the war with Spain, or any preceding war, and was honorably discharged, and died in their township or ward; whereupon, if they are satisfied that such facts exist, they shall take charge of the body of such deceased soldier, sailor, or marine and cause it to be buried in the manner mentioned in the first section of this act; and thereupon they shall immediately report their action in the case to the County Commissioners of the county, setting forth the facts ascertained by them, together with the name, rank, and command to which such deceased soldier, sailor or marine belonged at the time of his discharge, the date of discharge, the character of his occupation immediately preceding his death, the date of his death and place of burial, and also an accurately itemized statement of the expenses incurred in and about such burial; which report shall be duly attested by three reputable persons, of full age, residing in the township or ward in which such deceased soldier, sailor, or marine died, knowing the facts."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Going Lively

In August, September and October, 1914, FORD sales were 59,507 cars, an increase of approximately 100% over that period in 1913. November and December Ford sales promise to exceed even this. A more significant and encouraging feature is the fact this increase is general—the length and breadth of the country.

Another VERY significant fact is that Ford sales have not shown any sensational jump ANY ONE WEEK OR MONTH, but have steadily grown in volume and permanence day after day and week after week. An evidence that more and more the motor car is becoming a part of American life generally—it has ceased to be the "pet of the classes" and become "the necessity of the masses". NOW is the time to place your order for Spring delivery.

AUTO RACERS STOP HERE

New York to San Francisco Motion Picture Auto Race Stop Over Night in Bedford

Last Thursday afternoon there arrived at Bedford two large snow covered racing cars from New York on the way to the San Francisco Panama-Pacific Exposition over the Lincoln Highway. They spent the night here, leaving Bedford the next morning for Pittsburgh. Raoul F. LaMat, a prominent New York clubman and a noted automobile and aeroplane driver, accompanied by Miss Margaret Gale, one of the leading and beautiful American Motion Picture actresses, drove one of the racing cars and Stanley James, a prominent Washington, D. C., newspaper man, drove the other car. LaMat has bet James $5,000 that he can reach the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds first in an automobile race across the continent, the race to be decided on the actual running time. The racers are accompanied by a Motion Picture outfit and they claim to have made some wonderful thrilling pictures of the hardships and dangers of the cars and drivers battling with the heavy snows on the mountains just east of Bedford. They expect to get pictures of the cars in all the best scenery sections of the Lincoln Highway all the way from New York to Frisco.

This is the first trans-continental automobile run to be attempted in the middle of winter and the run is causing considerable interest in automobile circles all over the country.

Bedford Subordinate Grange No. 619, P. of H., held their annual installation and supper last Wednesday evening. To say everything was a success would be making it too mild. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves but Brothers Roberts and Donahoe. They seemed to have trouble in making their oyster broth and crackers come out even. It made them look full in the face but the feat was finally accomplished. New officers fill nearly all the chairs and everybody hopes for a continuation of the success of the Grange under the new administration.

We often wonder whether the new organizations formed in Bedford will endure the year out. We all know how the Board of Trade, the Good Roads Association, Merchants Association, etc., all went under. Can these new ones stay with it?

Now since the carver is entitled to a part of the foul or animal he carves so Gideon received a part of the contents of this elephant saving bank.

High Financier a Bankrupt

Josiah V. Thompson, the multimillionaire of Uniontown, Pa., went into voluntary bankruptcy on last Monday. His assets were $70,000, 000, alleged, and liabilities $22,000, 000, alleged, but his wealth is an estimated one, being mostly in coal lands in Greene, Fayette, Westmoreland Counties and West Virginia. The estimated wealth may be much less than the real wealth when the property comes to a sale. Thompson is in the East trying to float loans sufficient to tide over things and enable him to open up the First National Bank of Uniontown and proceed to business on his large scale. He is possibly the greatest money manipulator in Western Pennsylvania and will no doubt pull through this reverse all O. K.

Along with Thompson many of his associates have entered into bankruptcy to save themselves as best they can until settlements can be made and accounts determined.

THE GOVERNOR'S FIRST ADDRESS

State's New Chief Magistrate Discusses Public Affairs

COMPREHENSIVE DOCUMENT

Humbled and Steadied by the Greatness of the Obligation He Places His Faith That Divine Providence Will Guide Him.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 19.—Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh's inaugural address was delivered today. It follows: Fellow Citizens of Pennsylvania:

In assuming the duties of the office to which you have elected me, I am humbled and steadied by the greatness of the obligation imposed and the abiding conviction that I can do my duty only when aided and guided by the Divine. In His name and for His people I enter upon this new field of endeavor. Fortunate, indeed, are we that our Commonwealth is enjoying today the blessings of peace and the inheritance of a worthy record through successive administrations of its public affairs. To add an additional chapter to an already honorable record is my earnest desire. To this end I solicit your active co-operation and your unselfish support. This Commonwealth and the colony from which it grew have a record of achievement so splendid that we may take an honest pride in maintaining its traditions, in advancing its interests, in publishing its virtues, in resenting its assailants and in proclaiming our happy lot that we are Pennsylvanians.

Throughout the campaign I stood squarely upon my platform pledges, and was elected because the people believed I would use my utmost endeavor to secure legal enactments embodying these declarations. I shall assuredly do so. When 590,700 voters of this great Commonwealth give us a commission, they have a right to demand its fulfillment. A voice so potential is a command to the Legislature and the Executive which, if wise, both shall surely heed. If we give the people the laws they have demanded and we have promised, we shall perform a distinctly valuable service to the Commonwealth. If we fail to do this we must bear the consequences. I pledge myself to an unselfish service to the whole people of Pennsylvania, and ask your aid and active support both in securing good laws and in enforcing those now on the statute books.

We have been over-lawed. We have gone too far upon the theory that legislation is the cure of our social, economic and political ills. We have actually made legal criminals when, as a matter of duty, we should have addressed ourselves to the vastly more worthy task of educating our people into an increasing love for liberty, respect for law and devotion to our American civilization. We should never make a law that in its operation will work harm to the many and good only to the selfish or potential few. It is the business of government to make it easy to do right and difficult to do wrong. We need few additional laws. We could well afford to repeal many more than we enact. I trust, therefore, that we may all plan together to reduce enactments to a minimum, to reject all laws that do not hold the assurance of good to the many and so to facilitate legislation as to give to the people the few vital enactments they need and deserve. As speedily as may be, this we should do, and when this is done the Legislature should adjourn.

For the moral and the economic welfare of our people we must all stand surely and steadily. Our laws should be not only regulators of procedure, but educators of the public conscience. Our great assets are not material, but spiritual. A government that enriches life and widens a people's vision will endure. No other is worthy of the name. If we address ourselves anew to this holy experiment we shall easily add unto it all essential material good.

I am not unmindful that the quality of administration is the first concern and duty of the Governor. This I shall keep daily in mind. But I also submit that it is vital to the welfare of the people that the laws administered be of the sort that will ensure to our people "peace, safety and happiness." To secure such laws and no others is my duty quite as much as it is your duty. I take this occasion to urge upon you the importance of certain well defined wishes and admitted needs of our people.

Local Option.
I urge upon you, gentlemen of the Legislature, the enactment of a County Local Option law. The people of this Commonwealth have a perfect right to decide for themselves whether or not intoxicating liquors shall be sold in their several counties. This issue is before you. You must meet it, and meet it openly and fairly. I gave solemn assurance to the people that I favored such a law. Your Governor now asks you to join with him in its enactment. Every consideration of moment favors such procedure.
The sooner we do so the better. Let this vexed question be taken from partisan control and given directly to the people. They will solve it better than we can. The selection of judges in the several districts should no longer hang upon this question. It has already worked harm to the judiciary, and has lessened the regard of citi-

people for the integrity and capacity of the final legal guardians of the people's sacred rights. It is a dominant issue in the public mind. The party that has given this great State its industrial and educational development has now the sacred opportunity of giving the State a great moral uplift. I trust we shall not fail the people on this issue. I repeat I am unequivocally for county local option.
Highways.

The people who are producers in Pennsylvania have a perfect right to insist upon better transportation facilities, both by land and by water. We add substantial good to our people when we make it easy to transport a maximum load at a minimum cost from farm and factory to the best markets and market stations. Four years ago, under the apprehension that the people would approve a $50,000,000 loan for roads, the State took over more than 9,000 miles of highways. To this, at the last session of the Legislature, additions were made. We now have under State control 10,200 miles of highways. The loan was not approved. The roads were taken over.
This was a mistake. The current revenues will not properly care for these roads. They are becoming increasingly unsatisfactory. Unless largely increased revenues are provided it would be wise to admit this mistake and begin again upon the road problem. We must have now a road policy that will meet reasonable acceptance and permit of a continuous treatment for many years to come. The people need, and must have at once, better transportation facilities.

The State should find revenues adequate to the construction of a few great highways, routed between the great centers of population. These should be well built, and when built placed under the care of capable supervisors, whose duty it should be to keep them daily in good repair. It is sheer folly to construct a costly road and, unsupervised, allow it to deteriorate. These supervisors should be licensed road-keepers and not political accidents. Unless a man knows how to repair a road and is willing to put his knowledge to use, he ought never to receive appointment and pay from the State.

We also need State-aided roads.
These may perhaps best be worked out on the county unit plan. The county, with power to collect from each political sub-division its quota of road taxes, should receive an equal sum from the Commonwealth. The money thus secured should be expended pro-rata by the county upon the roads of the several townships. The routes should be as far as possible those connecting county seats, and the plans and perhaps all, surely part, of the supervision of construction be approved and supplied by the State. Roads should cost less than in the past. The people should know all the while what is being done and what expense is involved. A good highway is not only a public necessity, but an actually attainable good for our people.

The State has now many miles of privately owned roads. These are maintained; some well, some badly, by the fees exacted from the users.
These should be acquired and made a part of the public road system of the State. It is no credit to us that toll roads, once a blessing, now in irritation, should continue to exist in Pennsylvania.

So vital is this matter and so imminent is the demand that I urge you to reduce your appropriations in other directions as far as possible in order to give the highways the largest possible appropriations.

Civil Service.
The public service should be as efficient and economical as private service. I believe in and would approve a sane and practical State civil service.

Education.

Under the school code our schools have made commendable progress.
With few exceptions the provisions of that code are so essentially wise that they should not be changed. Your State Board of Education, to whom the law delegates the duty of suggesting such school legislation as should be enacted, will in due time advise you concerning the laws, if any, that would increase the efficiency of our schools. I commend their findings to you. As the number of pupils to be educated increases the appropriations should increase. More attention must be given to vocational education. We have the largest number of farmers of any State in the Union. Surely agriculture should command greater attention in our schools. I favor the creation of many rural high schools in which both boys and girls may be taught how to earn on the farm and in the home an honest livelihood. An education that does not increase the size of the loaf on the family table is scarcely worth the attention of our people. All education, no matter how liberal and cultural, should be so imparted as to make it usable. The facilities for training teachers should be improved, better supervision provided and higher education encouraged. But the emphasis of the State's concern should rest upon the schools of the many—the great common school so dear to our people and so essential to their welfare. We need a greatly enlarged permanent school fund. Universal education is the best safeguard of our liberties, and money devoted to right education is the State's best investment.

Woman Suffrage.

The resolution passed by the last legislature submitting an amendment to the Constitution providing for woman suffrage should be re-enacted and the voters allowed to determine for themselves whether or not women shall vote in Pennsylvania.

Appropriations to Charity.
Pennsylvania leads all States in its support of dependents. Its record should be maintained. But there is neither sense nor justice in unstudied appropriations to our many charitable institutions and agencies. These constitute important and wholly worthy objects of public concern and support.
The Legislature should know from competent authority their real needs and should follow such knowledge in making its appropriations. Moreover, the bounty of the State should never exceed the assured income of the State. It should not again occur that the obligation of lessening this bounty should be placed upon the Executive.
It may be that some wiser and surer method can be devised to ensure these funds doing the greatest good and reaching directly the institutions and agencies whose service is best or most needed. Surely the supervision of the State should follow absolutely its gifts. The State can afford to be generous only when it is just.

Labor and Its Claims.
The people who toil are among the choice assets of our Commonwealth.
For their protection, their comfort, their advancement, their happiness, we are all securely pledged. I shall welcome any laws that promote these essentially wise ends. We must enact a fair and certain Workmen's Compensation Act. Its provisions should secure reasonable compensation to those who in their daily toil suffer from accident or disease. It should assuredly make for the prevention of accidents. This compensation should be guaranteed. The funds for its prompt payment should be counted among the costs of production. In scope it should not include labor upon the farm nor domestic service. Great care should be exercised to see that the law be drawn in strict compliance with constitutional limitations. The present Liability Act needs amendment to the end that it may be in full accord with the above proposed act that both alike may guarantee to our workers the certain and speedy relief they merit and should have.

Our Child Labor Laws are inadequate and unsatisfactory. No child under sixteen should be allowed to work. He should be in school. The small sum he earns prior to sixteen at the cost of his physical and mental development is a pittance compared with the loss he and the Commonwealth sustain under present law.
Such "penny wise" and "pound foolish" laws are unworthy this great State. When a child is not at work under law he should be in school. He should never be a licensed loafer on the streets. The hours of toil should be supplemented by hours of study in school. Continuation schools to which our children who toil may resort for practical and specific aid should be maintained in every industrial center.
No child should be allowed to enter upon any form of service who is not certified by competent agents to be physically fit for such service.

In this great industrial State it is our duty to pay definite attention to the housing problem. Every family should be housed in a home that is private, sanitary, safe and attainable at a reasonable rental. I urge your attention to this important problem.
We cannot breed good citizen in disgraceful houses. It would be a great pleasure to me and a great blessing to our workmen if this problem were adequately met now.

Our Farms.
We have not learned how to make the most of our soil. The rewards of our toil on the farm are not what they should be. The State should grow more food than it consumes. We ought not to be buyers but sellers of foods. Money should flow to us, not away from us. The departments of the government charged with the conservation of our soil and the scientific development of our crops have sprung up, one at a time, as their services were required and no effort has been made to articulate and co-ordinate these several agencies. There is at least departmental confusion if not actual duplication and conflict of activities. All this means waste in funds and lessened service to the farmer. I hope in this session of the Legislature to have such action taken as will separate the teaching from the administrative functions of these agencies and reduce each to an ordered and scientific service. The funds for the advancement of our agricultural interests ought to express themselves much more largely in wheat and corn and potatoes and less in clerical and other forms of routine service. Let us legislate for the farmer rather than for the office holder.

Municipal Regulation.

Our cities have grown more rapidly than our rural districts. Our urban population is so complex that it scarcely knows how to apply the principles of democracy. These people will learn, even if they blunder, when they have the fullest responsibility of control placed squarely upon them.
They will learn much more slowly, if at all, while the State at long range is the large regulator of their conduct and their corporate life. Our laws ought not to hinder but help these great groups speedily to find themselves in the difficult task of adjusting municipal affairs to individual welfare. The State should give these municipalities wider freedom of opportunity to develop as they would,
and to place responsibility upon them so to regulate their affairs as to make our cities centers of moral uplift and examples of clean, capable administration.

Conservation.

Once Pennsylvania was rich in natural resources and unequalled in natural beauty. Much of its wealth has been taken from it. Much yet remains. Its ownership has passed to private and to corporate agencies.

They have rights that must be respected. So also have the people of the State a claim upon these great natural assets. In their marketing the Commonwealth plays an essential part. In the returns the people ought also to share. A reasonable tax upon our great natural resources as they flow to our markets is both fair and wise.
Our public lands represent a new and increasingly valuable asset. We should speedily acquire more acres and assist nature to reforest the same.
The State can well afford to invest part of its income for the welfare of succeeding generations. Indeed, if we love our Commonwealth more than we love our personal gain, we shall assuredly foster our resources and, whenever possible, add to them.

We fail to sense this obligation aright if we do not remember that our people are our greatest asset. Whatever makes for their good is conservation of the loftiest kind. That they may be safeguarded in their health, their recreation, their education, their homes, their worship, their property, their regulated freedom, their toil, should be our constant endeavor.

Conclusion.

Pennsylvania has always given home and haven to the people of the civilized world. Here we have had for a quarter of a millenium the most heterogeneous population of any State. There has never been persecution or oppression. In peace, in order, in brotherhood, we have grown into a mighty people, an empire of substantial purpose. Our people are law abiding and liberty loving. They want the right things to prevail. They welcome the unselfish leadership of clean men. They want and must have a clean, capable and conscientious administration of their public affairs.
Those of us that serve should be honestly honest with them. They have a perfect right to know, and they shall know, what this administration stands for and will steadily do.

In the performance of public service let us adopt the finest code of our best citizens and put private integrity into public service. Let us all devoutly pray for this great State and by our words and our deeds humbly help our common God to save, to honor, to exalt this splendid Commonwealth. He has given into our care and keeping.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine.
Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to John R. Dull's Drug Store and ask for 2 ounces (50c worth) of Schiffmann's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water, which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchitis, Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used.
Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee.—Adv. 18 Dec. 8t.

Kitchen Kinks
After drying salt for the table, do not fill the salt cellars until the salt is quite cold, otherwise it will harden in a lump.

When using gasoline to remove spots, we usually find the spot disappears but a yellow ring remains.
This can be avoided by adding a little salt to the gasoline before using.

Japanese tea trays should not be washed in hot water. If greasy, a little flour rubbed on with a bit of soft linen, will give them a new look; if they are scratched, rub over a little olive oil.

When the lamp wick is too large for the burner and does not turn up readily, drawing a few threads from the middle of the wick, instead of cutting down the sides, is more satisfactory, as it keeps the wick from raveling.

If You Are Nervous and are losing weight, we recommend that you take

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion containing Hypophosphites for a short time. A prescription which we gladly endorse.

Gospel for Soldiers

Among the numerous appeals for victims of the European War, the World's Sunday School Association of New York is planning supplying the soldiers at the front with copies of the New Testament.

"A million nickels from a million Sunday School scholars for a million testaments for a million soldiers in the hospitals, camps, war prisons and battlefields of the great war." This is the slogan of the association's movement. John Wanamaker, it is announced, will bear all the admin-that all of the nickels contributed can be used exclusively for the purchase of testaments.

POULTRY MADE PROFITABLE ON ALL FARMS

Long Houses Necessitate Narrow Yards, Which Restrict Range and Yard Cultivation.

(By H. L. KEMPSTER.)

The secret of success in raising poultry is to provide conditions as nearly natural as possible. Such conditions the farmer-poultryman is in position to provide. With unlimited range at his disposal there is no need for him to crowd his poultry into small yards. Limited range, encumbered with large numbers of division fences, makes it impossible to give the poultry yards proper cultivation. This causes them to become filthy and unsanitary, a condition which is responsible for most poultry diseases. The success of poultry enterprises is usually measured by the extent of range provided for the purpose. Commercial plants which depend upon small yards are usually short-lived. Better sanitary conditions would yield the farmer more satisfactory results.

The most common mistake in locating the farm poultry house is that of placing it so close to other farm buildings that hens overrun the latter. The usual plan of locating the poultry house between the barns and the dwelling house, is especially disagreeable since it encourages the hens to not only overrun the barns, but the back porch of the house as well. This habit is encouraged by throwing the crumbs, table scraps, etc., out from the kitchen door. Under such conditions poultry keeping is not only unpleasant but impractical and the reader is urged to consider these points in selecting a satisfactory site.

A low spot is unsuitable for a poultry house, because surface water is apt to accumulate and damp air always settles in such a place. Land which is naturally wet, either because of the nature of the soil or because of spring conditions, should be properly drained. Muddy quarters cause fowls to consume large amounts of filth. This in addition to the dampness of such a location results in unhealthy flocks. There is also the probability of the eggs becoming dirty, resulting in an inferior product, even if thoroughly cleaned. A windbreak should be provided which will not only afford protection from disagreeable winds but furnish an abundance of shade.

If possible the poultry house should be located upon a south or east slope. This is not so important, however, as convenience to other farm buildings. The location of a poultry house in an orchard is ideal if the trees do not shade the runs so that they remain damp. The trees furnish necessary summer shade.

Poultry raising has resolved itself into two systems: the intensive system, involving houses of considerable size, or many houses, and a large amount of stock upon a small area; and the extensive or colony house system, in which small houses are scattered over large areas. The former has advantages in that the labor resulting from the care of the flock, especially during the winter, is reduced to a minimum. In general the expense of housing is less than where fowls are kept in small flocks. It has the disadvantage of increasing the amount of yard care on account of the limited yard space. The intensive system, with many small houses, as usually practiced in city lots, involves an enormous amount of detail work, unpleasant in bad weather, and too expensive as a system to be practical except where more favorable conditions are impossible.

The extensive or colony house system necessitates more labor in the care of the flocks during stormy weather when the birds are confined. It has the advantage, however, of unlimited yard space and yard fencing can be quite largely eliminated. Often the poultry can be permitted the range of fields after the crops are started, without appreciable injury to the crop, utilizing to good advantage the droppings which would otherwise go to waste. In some localities worthless land has been brought to a high state of fertility by this practice.

The most healthful and economical method of raising the young chickens is the portable house system. The houses are moved about the farm in such places as orchards, farm lanes, cornfields, wheat and barley fields after the grain has been removed. The shade, green food, bugs, worms, grasshoppers, etc., are much more conducive to a rapid, healthful growth than are the conditions usually found around the dooryard.

WINTER EXERCISE FOR HENS

Thick Hedge Around Poultry House Makes Excellent Windbreak—Sheltered Nooks Afforded Outside.

A windbreak of some sort makes a poultry house warmer on the inside and gives the fowls a sheltered place for outdoor exercise, says a writer in Successful Farming. The owner of a chicken house built under the shelter of a number of evergreen trees says drinking water hardly ever freezes inside. And I noticed at the time I was visiting this place in the winter that the snow lodged on the trees and the ground underneath was bare. And everywhere around the ground was covered with snow.

Hens like to get outside the chicken house for a little while when the weather will permit, but they don't like to wade in snow. Hens roosting in trees when a snowstorm comes will stay in the trees until they get hungry rather than fly down in the snow to get something to eat.

A thick hedge around the poultry house and yard makes a good windbreak. We have found a tall board fence on the north and west of the house and yards quite a good deal of protection to the hens in winter, besides giving a sheltered location for the early chicks. The little fellows get close to this board fence on a raw day and don't feel the wind much that would otherwise soon chill the life out of them. We made this fence out of old boards.

Often the henhouse or brooder house can be located where other buildings will break the force of the wind. It seems to me this subject is not given the attention it deserves. In locating houses or yards in a cold climate advantage should be taken of everything that will give protection and afford fowls, old and young, sheltered nooks outside. It will save in the cost of food alone in winter, for sheltered fowls need less food than those exposed.

Have Supply of Insecticide. Every one interested in poultry should have a good insecticide on hand for the prompt annihilation of lice.

Dry Picking Best.

Fowls that are dry picked present a much better appearance than those that are scalded.

CAUSE OF EGG EATING HABIT

Hens That Learn Trick Communicate it to Others—Many Different Cures are Advocated.

Egg eating is caused by lack of nests, overcrowding, want of opportunity to exercise, or lack of litter to exercise in, and nests that are located low down in the light where the chickens are tempted to scratch in the nest boxes, thus rolling out the eggs. Once the trick is learned, no eggs are safe, and the birds that first learn this bad habit communicate it to others. To prevent, give plenty of room in the hen house, and have a suitable place for the chickens to scratch in. Put the nests in a secluded corner, as dark as is practicable and furnish enough of them. Give the chickens plenty of green food.

Different cures are advocated. Some say that a quantity of china eggs scattered over the chicken house floor will discourage the practice; others that a bushel or less of egg shells fed liberally will satisfy the hens' craving for lime, and break up the habit; others that old plaster and plenty of grit is a help; occasionally someone will claim that eggs doctored with red pepper puts a stop to it. The best cure is prevention.

Backyard Poultry.

Backyard poultry raising is no longer an experiment. Its success has been demonstrated time and again; in fact, it is carried on in many climates and under various conditions, and its popularity has just fairly started.

Ducks Ready for Market.

Properly fed ducks should be ready for market when ten weeks old and will weigh twice as much as chickens of the same age and pay a better profit.

Small Flock is Best.

On the farm especially it costs more to keep a flock that cannot secure a large proportion of its food, while the smaller flock will require less time and attention.

Hen Qualifications.

Important qualifications in a hen are that she shall be a good feeder, bright, clear-eyed, quick in action, clean and not scatty.

MOTHER

We don't know who George Edward Jackson is, or was, but we can't help reprinting an article we saw credited to him the other day. It follows:

"Every day is Mother's day. We never knew a day without mother, and thank God, we never shall. Back as far as memory carries us we find her. She is the first person we came to know. Her face bent over the cradle in which we lay. Her voice was the first we heard in the morning and the last we heard at night.

"As we grew through boyhood and girlhood, she was always there; there to wipe away the tears, to pick the thorns from our fingers, to kiss the bruises, to mend our torn garments, to cook for us, wash for us, pray for us.

"When we left the old home hers was the last face we saw as we turned the bend in the road. She stood shading her tear-dimmed eyes with her hand, looking, looking—and still praying.

"We came back and went again. She was always mother.

"No word exists that can define her—it were sacrilege to attempt. We can liken her to nobody and to nothing. She stands alone.

"Is she still here, as we have always known her? Then happy son, happy daughter! Is she only a memory? Then blessed possession, for she is still ours. Death cannot take her from us. The years are powerless to blot out her image. As we shall sink into the long sleep her dear face will look into ours.

"Her presence and her memory are so interwoven with all the best that we think and feel and purpose, that to lose her would be to reduce our whole life to ruin.

"O woman, how sublime is your mission of motherhood!

"No throne is so lofty as the throne of motherhood. No government has so great power as does the magic scepter of motherhood. No kingdom so secure as is the kingdom of motherhood.

"States change, governments perish and nations migrate, all things ebb and flow, but Mother is Mother, from the beginning to the end of time. She changes not. Her day is yesterday, today and forever."

The Hall of Fame

In every community there is a Hall of Fame, which may not be set up on the public square. It may not be preserved among the tangible treasures in the State House or the Hall of History; but it has an existence more enduring than any of these. The woman who relieves distress, who provides for the needy, who extends a helping hand to the unfortunate, makes for herself a place in the Hall of Fame. The man who deals fairly with his neighbor, who stands for morality in business, for justice in government, and who puts his shoulder to the wheel to push along the chariot of progress has his place, too—and an undying place—in the Hall of Fame.

This Hall of Fame of which I speak is builded in the memories and the affections of the people. It is as enduring as time. It is perpetuated from generation to generation. This is a democratic Hall of Fame, for it is open not only to the soldier who conquers, to the hero who saves, to the statesman who directs the affairs of the nation, to the author who molds the minds of the multitude; but it is open as well to the humblest man or woman in the humblest walk of life, to the boy or girl who lives and thinks and does the things that make for a better community and a better world. Election to this Hall of Fame is not by servants, not by societies of learned men and women, but by the people who do every day the common things, experience the common joys and sorrows, but who after all, are of the salt of the earth.—Fraternal Union.

Woman's Home Companion

One of the striking contributions to the February Woman's Home Companion is an article by Rev. Charles Steile entitled "Making the Church Do Real Work." In the same issue, Ida M. Tarbell writes on "The Talkative Woman," and Anne Morgan, daughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, writes another talk to "The American Girl." Fiction is contributed by many noted writers. The regular Fashion, Cooking, Young People's, Housekeeping, and Entertainment departments complete an unusually practical and spirited number.

OVERDRAWING YOUR HEALTH ACCOUNT

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D.

We are all more or less familiar with the strict rules of banks in regard to individual credit. We do not expect to be permitted to overdraw our accounts. But with our drafts on the Bank of Health the majority of us expect more liberal treatment. Over drafts, promises to pay, notes of hand we give with a prodigious spirit and growl mightily if called to account by Mother Nature for extravagance.

Every one begins life with a certain amount of capital in the way of health and resistance to disease. This varies in different individuals according to the physique which they have inherited from their parents plus or minus the conditions under which they developed in their youth. We start life as men and women with this variable amount to our credit. When it has been expended we are through.

Every dissipation and every illness which means the expenditure of physical energy withdraws just so much from your health account. It is common enough to hear people who have been ill speak of being "cured" but physicians are well aware that this is a relative term only. Every serious illness has its effect upon the system and even though we may feel no decided change, almost invariably there has been some diminution from normal. It is the same with exhaustion from excesses physical and mental strain. Subject yourself to these trials and after a period of rest you may recuperate. However, if you continue this recuperation will be slower and slower and eventually the over strained machinery will break down. For this reason it behooves everyone to exercise reasonable caution and restraint in eating and the expenditure of physical and mental energy. Remember that the doctor cannot restore that which is already lost.

Expend your energies in a healthy way and keep the balance of your health account as much as you can as possible, never exhausting it.

A Convalescent

containing Hypophosphites is a most reliable prescription which we always recommend for that purpose.
